BIG CROWD WATCHES FLIGHT

American Aviator in France Makes Successful Ascension at Auvours, and Declares He Never Traveled So Fast in His Life-Traces Figure Eight in Air-Keeps Close to Earth,

Le Mans, France, Aug. 21.-Nearly opposite the point from which Wilbur Wright, the American aviator, makes his starts on the artillery grounds at Auvours is a stand for the inspecting officer during military exercises. It is about the same height as the derrick from which the weight used in starting Wright's aeroplane is dropped. On top there is a small flag.

There was just wind enough this afternoon to flap this feebly without keeping it extended. Wright began his preparations for his flight at 3:40. The engine was tested. It started promptly and worked particularly well.

Describes Figure Eight.

A start was not made until 5:50 o'clock. Wright, who appeared to be far from well, kept the aeroplane unusually low, from four to six yards from the ground. He traced the figure eight, doubling the lower circle. The time was 1 minute 46

At 6:22 another start was made, and the machine described in 2 minutes 9 seconds the figure eight, with a very large lower circle. It was kept higher than before, but not exceeding eighteen yards. In order to avoid the presence of a crowd, which is so distasteful to Wright, only the holders of special cards were admitted to the grounds, but several hundred persons crowded around the edge of the

Wright afterward told a corresponden that he never went so fast in his life. He thinks he made fifty miles an hour with the wind, and that he averaged from thirty-six to thirty-nine miles, but he had no instruments to test his speed. Competent onlookers, however, judge that he never exceeded a rate of forty five miles an hour and averaged thirty-
